

Each year since 1994, Scotia Waterous, formerly Waterous & Co., has produced a book of photography focusing on the work of a single photographer. Louise Abbott's portfolio on French-speaking Newfoundlanders was showcased in the third volume, published in 1996.

In sponsoring the photographic book series, Scotia Waterous has provided important support to the careers of serious photographers from around the world. The books, exquisitely printed and elegantly designed, are now collectors' items and a photographic legacy. They are works of art in themselves and reside in prestigious collections around the world.

The year 2013 marked Scotia Waterous' twentieth consecutive year of commitment to the photographic arts. This year's book, Legacy: Twenty Years of Global Black-and-White Photography, features a collection of photographs from the past nineteen books—two images from each photographer.

Craig Richards, the curator of the The Photographers of Scotia Waterous exhibition at the Whyte Museum of the Canadian Rockies in Banff, also mounted an exhibition, "The Photographers of Scotia Waterous," which includes each of the photographer's two photographs as well as two recent works. The vernissage was held on February 1, 2014, and the show will run until March 30, 2014.

Craig Richards shows gallerygoers a copy of Legacy at the Whyte Museum of the Canadian Rockies in Banff during the vernissage of "The Photographers of Scotia Waterous." Photo by Niels Jensen.

150%;">Louise Abbott's recent images in the exhibition are drawn from her portfolio on the Cree of northern Quebec, or Eeyou Istchee, as they call their territory.  Louise speaking about her work at the vernissage of "The Photographers of Scotia Waterous" exhibition at the Whyte Museum of the Canadian Rockies in Banff. Photo by Niels Jensen.